Suryanarayana Raju under the Gopi Krishna Films banner, presented by Krishnam Raju[2] and directed by K. Raghavendra Rao. [3] It stars Dilip Kumar, Jeetendra, Rohini Hattangadi, Sridevi in key roles and music composed by Bappi Lahiri. [4] The film is a remake of the film Telugu Bobbili Brahmanna (1984), starring Krishnam Raju, Sharada, Jayasudha in the main roles, both films are produced by the same banner and director. The two roles of Dilip Kumar and Jeetendra are played by Krishnam Raju in Telugu. [5] Plot Dharamraj (Dilip Kumar) is the king of nanggaon without a crown, which was from his ancestors. There is neither a court nor a police station in this village. Dharamraj is the only judge and commissioner of this village. Villagers bow before his judgment and accept him as God's judgment, and he also does justice to everyone and does not hesitate to give punishment, whether he is poor or rich, or whether it is his own relative or his own blood. Everyone is happily living a fearless and peaceful life. They respect and worship Dharamraj as God. But Chaudhury (Pran) and Shastry (Kader Khan) from the village are jealous of the popularity of Dharamraj. They are waiting for an opportunity to take him out of his justice seat and Chaudhury has a dream to occupy it. Dharamraj has a wife named Savitri (Rohini Hattangadi), a sweet and kind daughter named Arti (Anuradha Patel) and a strong and nice brother named Prakash (Jeetendra). Beautiful Priya (Sridevi) and charming Sudha (Priti Sapru) are the daughters of a poor villager. Chaudhury has a mischievous son named Chotu. Once because of Chotu's mischief Sudha lost her voice. Dharamraj made the judgment that Chotu should marry a stupid Sudha. This makes Chaudhury irritated and he becomes the enemy of Dharamraj. He later will reveal that Dharamraj keeps the widow by visiting her and paying her money monthly. He opens matters of Dharamraj in front of the villagers, but he fails. On the one hand, Priya and Prakash love each other and on the other hand, Arti and Arun, the son of a widow who is maintained by Dharamraj, are also. Chaudhury again plays the game and Dharamraj gives judgment against his daughter that she should marry the same poor villager who lost sight of Arti. Prakash argues with Dharamraj and performs the marriage of Arti and Arun. Dharamraj becomes wild and asks him to leave the village with Arti and Arun. Savitri goes and performs his daughter's pregnancy ceremony, at which Dharamraj sends her away from his house. Chaudhury and Shastry are very happy with their success. And to end the last scene of their drama, they want to kill Arun and his mother. Prakash will come to the scene and save them. Dharamraj also connects hands with Prakash. Dharamraj kills Chaudhury and handed himself in to the police.
